- B. By Order G-60-25, the BCUC established the regulatory timetable for the proceeding, which included public notice of the Application, intervener registration, one round of information requests (IRs), and final and reply arguments;
- C. On May 15, 2025, FBC filed an update to the Application (Updated Application) and responses to IRs, which resulted in amendments to its approval sought, and proposed a second round of IRs;
- D. In the Updated Application, FBC requests approval of revenue and rate rebalancing proposals, including the following changes to rate schedules (RS) effective January 1, 2026:
 - 1. For RS 20 Small Commercial Service and 22 Commercial Service – Secondary – Time of Use, rebalancing of all billing-determinant-related rate components such that revenues are decreased by 2.4 percent;

- E. With regard to the approvals sought for RS 60, FBC also seeks approval of a non-rate base deferral account titled the Irrigation Rebalancing Phase-in deferral account, attracting FBC’s weighted average cost of capital, to be amortized over the proposed five-year phase-in period and recovered from all customers through FBC’s general rate increases;
- F. FBC also requests the following approvals in the Updated Application to update the transformation discount as a result of the 2025 COSA study under RS 21, 30, and 40 for customers who choose to take service at the primary distribution voltage level (RS 21) or at the transmission voltage level (RS 30 and 40), effective January 1, 2026:
